Millennial Magic

You Millennials - defined by demographers as having birthdates ranging from the 1980s to the early 2000s - are a different breed of human being from your parents. I'm in the latter breed. I didn't grow up with home computers, social media, smart phones, texting, and OMG everything else. Rather than a discreet buzzing in my pocket on the rare occasion I got a call from a creature of the opposite sex, it was on the home phone and followed by my sister's hollering for the whole house to hear, "Johnny, it's for you-oo! It's a grr-rrr!"

Taking a call like that in the living room where the whole family could hear is a right of passage that you Millennials have missed altogether. Texting, sexting, likes and downloads, Instagram, and free music downloads and 24/7 connectivity have brought y'all up with a constant buzz of activity that we mere Boomers never even imagined. Fax machines were cutting edge technology when I was in my twenties and I didn't have my first home PC until I was in my thirties. My kids' video games were a wonder to me.

Thanks to this technological revolution you young folks in business today have a tremendous leg up starting out, with knowledge at your fingertips and no limits like geography or time of day or to a great degree, financial limitations to hold you back (think crowdfunding, for example, so much easier than going hat in hand to a bank vice president or worse, one's parents). Sure, most of you could use some work on eye contact or doing most anything without looking down at a phone screen, but some things about human beings never change - like creativity, drive, and diverse talents. In SewBiz you've got all that plus the limitless artistic and practical applications of sewing - and now a new door open to entrepreneurship and free enterprise. Put it all together and you've got Millennial Magic!

Good luck this year, and thanks for keeping SouthStar Supply in SewBiz, too!
