How's the weather?

I still stubbornly use a flip phone because I value at least SOME privacy and freedom in my life, but my better half is on that dang "smart" phone all the time. Including checking the weather about every hour. It will tell her that it will rain at 3PM for example. I ignore that and go about my business. Despite all the satellites, computer modeling, radar and whatnot, Mother Nature is going to do what she's going to do. Life is a lot less stressful if you just grin and bear it over things you cannot control.

Economics is a lot like meteorology. First of all, would someone explain what meteors have to do with weather? Nor are economics economical. Both subjects are pseudo-sciences. All we mere mortals can do is guess at the economy just as we guess at the weather. Someone greater than us is in charge. Or at least, count on this: We are not really in charge of anything but ourselves.

So now the forecasts of the certain recession are coming into doubt. Yes, inflation was predictable. You let your government spend too much money and drive up energy costs, prices in general are bound to go up. That's why we stopped putting prices in this Bulletin. But unlike taxes and the ever rising prices of goods and services, there's not a single number that comes from high places that we can trust any more than that 3PM rain forecast.

So we folks who ARE the wheels of commerce must hedge our bets and keep an umbrella handy. I can tell that a lot of you customers out there are doing just that. Order quantities and frequency and payments go up and down with the economic weather reports. But here's the good news: better weather will come eventually.

I hope and pray we all survive the weather and the Wizards of Smart who keep trying to change it by confiscating and squandering our tax dollars. And most of all, I wish you good luck and thank you for your patronage!
